Lastly, the site of surgical wound infection was assigned as surgical site infection or other site infection. Statistical analysis {#Sec7} -------------------- This study used descriptive statistics to determine the occurrence of surgical wound infection, by calculating its incidence, prevalence, and prevalence density based on the number of patients examined. Prevalence was calculated by dividing the number of patients infected with surgical wound infection by the total number of patients. The annual rate of infection was calculated using the prevalence and the total number of samples. Prevalence density was calculated by dividing the number of patients infected with surgical wound infection by the total number of patients. Incidence was calculated using the prevalence and the number of patients examined. The number of cases of surgical wound infection was divided by the rate of infection to obtain a prevalence percentage, and a χ^2 test was used to analyze the frequency of surgical wound infection, which was calculated with 95% confidence intervals (CIs) using the cross ratio. Statistical analyses of risk factors for surgical wound infection were performed using the chi-square test or the χ^2 test for each categorical variable, using a statistical software package (Statsoft Inc., Tulsa, OK, USA, version 7.0). The level of significance was set at P \ 71 year group (P = 0.026, Table [
