Superficial venous anomalies are a common and recurrent problem in dermatologic practice. The aim of this study was to assess the efficacy and safety of carbon dioxide as a sclerosing agent in the treatment of small to medium-sized peripheral venous malformations. A prospective study was conducted involving the treatment of 22 venous malformations using sclerotherapy with carbon dioxide. This involved the treatment of 26 out of 108 venous malformations (twenty-seven percent) with injected sclerosant over a 4-year period. Carbon dioxide was the sclerosing agent of choice. The indications for treatment were recurrent venous malformation (91.7%) and inflammatory venous lesions (8.3%). With a total follow-up period of 27 months, there was a significant reduction in the size of the lesions. Our study shows that sclerotherapy
