To investigate the expression of somatostatin receptor subtype 2 (sst2) in the cases of lung cancer patients and its clinical significance. Immunohistochemistry (SP) was used to detect the expression of sst2 protein in the lung cancer tissues and to analyze its clinical significance. Lung cancer tissues were positively stained by SP in 90.0% of the cases (19/21) and the percentage in adenocarcinoma was higher than that in squamous cell carcinoma (100.0% vs 38.1%, P 0.05; 100.0% vs 71.4%, P > 0.05). The expression of sst2 protein in lung cancer tissues was higher than that in normal lung tissues and there was a close correlation between it and the growth and metastasis of lung cancer. This study indicated that sst2 might be one of the factors of growth and metastasis of lung cancer.Q: Repository pattern usage in a MVC 4 Asp.net application?
