Asterisk Password Spy With Registration Code

Asterisk Password Spy is a PC-based application that will reveal passwords stored in the clipboard as well as saved passwords on your hard drive. It is easy to use and quick to implement, as it searches for hidden text by replacing it with asterisks (“*”) using two attributes: the process ID (PID) and the name of the program (progname). With this application, you can perform three types of searches: the password field, the history, and the clipboard. Let’s see how it works. At first, you have to locate the “Asterisk Password Spy” app on your PC. If you are using the Windows Explorer, you can do so by clicking on the “All apps” option in the “This PC” tab. If you prefer to use the Windows File Manager, just open the folder on which you saved the application file and go through the “Apps” folder. When you have successfully located the application, you will need to launch the app. This means simply opening the “Asterisk Password Spy” icon in the Windows menu. After that, the next step is to type the password you want to reveal, in any of the aforementioned password fields. Once you have completed the search, you will see the result displayed in the same window. The next step is to export the search results in different formats for further analysis. To do so, just go to “File” and “Export Data”. On the first page, you will be asked to select an output format. You have the choice between HTML, XML, and CSV. If you do not want to include the passwords on the clipboard, select the “None” option.
