A federal judge gave the Justice Department until November 6 to submit a more detailed plan for restoring and maintaining the federal health insurance exchange website. In a ruling late Monday, U.S. District Judge Henry H. Kennedy Jr. ordered the administration to respond to his order giving the government until Aug. 24 to provide an adequate explanation for technical issues that have plagued HealthCare.gov. He also ordered the administration to give an estimate of the cost of fixing the website. The judge set a deadline of Nov. 6 for the government's further proposal. "While this Court is deeply troubled by the problems experienced by the public with the website, its ruling clearly prevents Defendant from making additional claims on the subject in the future," Kennedy wrote. Kennedy, a Clinton appointee, acknowledged that the government came into compliance 570a42141b
