

The bot then waits for the WoW soundbar to change its color at the given destination. (This works because the fish trigger is very loud and easy to get... ^^) Otherwise you can use the audio player to play the sound and then use that back button at the bottom of your activity. This action then returns the listener to the first state. This is more efficient than listening with a listener or detecting on the resize event if you need to jump back when you're listening for something that looks like a resize. When using a custom class for this action,
