effect of homocysteine on collagen synthesis by mouse vascular smooth muscle cells. Homocysteine is an amino acid that can be metabolized to an intermediate in the formation of homocysteine thiolactone (HTL), a powerful inhibitor of collagen synthesis. When vascular smooth muscle cells were treated with HTL, the production of [3H]proline, [3H]hydroxyproline, [3H]proline-5-hydroxyproline and [3H]hydroxylysine (HL) decreased by 80%, 50%, 60% and 30%, respectively, when compared to controls. The decrease in [3H]proline production was accompanied by a 30% decrease in collagen production. When vascular smooth muscle cells were incubated in the presence of HTL plus a low concentration of methionine (2 microM), the decrease in collagen synthesis was reversed to levels in untreated cells. When other amino acids were added in the presence of HTL plus methionine, the reversal in collagen synthesis was not observed. The reversal was also not observed when homocysteine was added to vascular smooth muscle cells in the presence of methionine. In addition, HTL-induced decreases in collagen synthesis were not observed in homocystinuria-vascular smooth muscle cells. These results indicate that the decrease in collagen synthesis induced by HTL is due to the accumulation of HTL. In addition, homocysteine appears to be required for the accumulation of HTL.

Q: How to access a constexpr variable in another constexpr? I'm trying to compile the following test code in GCC 6.3 and clang 4.0. If I change the declaration of a to a constexpr, the program won't compile. But it compiles fine if I set a to a non-constexpr. How can I access a from b? #include <string> int main() { constexpr int a = 20; constexpr int b = a + 5; constexpr int c = b + 5; constexpr int d = c + 5; constexpr int e = d + 5; std::cout
