Cohen Media Award is a Canadian music award. History The award, which was created in 1997, is given to honour "outstanding contributions to Canadian music broadcasting". It is presented by Rogers Communications, the Canadian media corporation that owns the Canadian radio network The New as well as CTV and Global, both owned by Bell Media. The award is given in the categories of TV/streaming, radio, music services, and "Independent Music Album of the Year". The "Independent Music Album of the Year" award is presented to both an album and an artist who have not been previously recognized by the award. The award is named after David S. Cohen, the founder of CHUM Limited, the predecessor of Bell Media/The New. Recipients This is a list of recipients of the David S. Cohen Media Award.
