RELATED: Turn Any Photos Into Art Adobe Photoshop CS3 Basic Tutorial Adobe Photoshop CS3 is the newest version of the popular image editing software, which debuted in 2004. CS3 is a huge upgrade from its predecessor, Photoshop CS2, with many new features that are beneficial for both the beginner and the professional. This tutorial will introduce you to Photoshop CS3's features and tools. It will take you through the basic steps needed to manipulate a digital image, from creating and opening a new document to final image production. Step 1: Create a New Photoshop File The first step to editing an image is to open an image file in Photoshop and make an adjustment to it if required. To start, you need to create a new document on your computer. Click the File menu, select New, and choose "Photoshop document" to create a new image. You can also choose "Photoshop document (Auto save)" if you prefer to have the file automatically save each time you edit it. Either way, you will be presented with the default Photoshop document template, where the background is white and the default layer is set as a black solid fill. You will be prompted to save your file before you start editing. Note: If you don't see the file name in the dialog box, simply right-click the picture in the left window and choose "New" from the menu. Then, save the file. It can be saved in a folder or directly open from a disk or other file. Select the file in the thumbnail view and then press Ctrl+I to open the dialog box. Click "File," then "Open" to open the file and import it into the editing window. Step 3: Start Editing To start editing your image, press Ctrl+A (Windows) or Cmd+A (Mac) to select all the layers. It is also possible to select the layer by clicking on it in the

Q: Need to insert multiple rows in SQLite, but can't figure out the right query I need to insert multiple rows into a table in SQLite, but I don't know the right SQL statement to get it to work. I've got one row that works. INSERT INTO [searches].[patient_mapping] (patient_id, patient_handle, search_text) VALUES ('1', 'First Name', 'First Name first'); This is what I tried to make multiple rows. INSERT INTO [searches].[patient_mapping] (patient_id, patient_handle, search_text) VALUES ('1', 'First Name', 'First Name first'), ('2',

What's New In?

Ok, so did anyone else's twitter updates look like they turned into a pop-up ads or something? That's just my experience. And can anyone explain why anyone would try to schedule a tweet on Twitter if they're going to do something like this? If my phone could still sense my location after it was scrunched up in my pocket, it would be too dumbfounded to stop. The human body at its functional limit. I'm sure a developer would love to delve into the specifics of why this could possibly happen, but in general, it's probably something involving the geolocation API (and probably a lot of variables) having a bad day. My phone is in my pocket and it just happens that I was at Walmart. I went to the store with the intention of getting a new charger. I noticed the charger looked good so I stopped and bought it. It's about 10 am here so I should be home by 1pm. I won't check twitter until 10pm tomorrow. I'm guessing twitter had to push the send button at 9:45am which is when I was at the store. If my phone could still sense my location after it was scrunched up in my pocket, it would be too dumbfounded to stop. The human body at its functional limit. I know, the device was in my pocket but I was at the store 10 mins before this Twitter message. So far it's just happened to me twice. I also saw a couple of other tweets on the same account (twt) this morning that were all in the same way. Which is actually quite comforting. So far, the only way I can get an external battery from Twitter is to fork over money. I'm not that interested in giving Twitter money. I already tweet and my follower count is kinda low. But if it continues to happen, I may try using my laptop (iOS). If anyone does know how to fix it, please do tell. I really want this feature and only tweet from my phone.
