In other News, we've been hard at work on the next version of the Elden Ring client. As of now, the update is scheduled to go live on the 28th of this month. We're looking forward to the update with great enthusiasm! Should you be using the client on Windows 10 Mobile, we've just gone live with an update. As always, you can find the latest client version here. As always, you can find the latest client version here: If you have any questions, feel free to contact us at: So it's been over 2 months since we announced Nexon Arena and have been working hard to complete the first iteration of it. As of now, it's finally ready and we would like to invite everyone to jump in and give it a try. Last weekend, we had a closed beta test where we would be invited to play the game. With our progress, we have decided to make the test open to everyone. Our plans right now are to

A special thanks goes out to the have an amazing knowledgeable Carol Ann Barden. She has taken care of the dogs from the time I was small. Her emt skills to treat the animals is amazing. I know if there is an animal in trouble she will find them and get them to you fast. She will stay at the home to care of the animals. We are lucky to have her on staff.Andrea by Walter Bonn Size: 16”x18” Resolution: 80dpi Couleur : Black & White This could be for the wife of a sportsman, if your mates are your hounds - I just had the photo taken by the good lady friend whom attended the day when the hounds and huntsmen called. The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) fired Mathieu Perrault for violating an “immediate notification” rule, according to ABC News. Perrault was an employee of a contractor at the agency and had been employed by TSA for over a year. She’d been working from the agency’s Tulsa office on April 6, but missed her bus home. Perrault had been in a verbal altercation with her supervisor and, two hours after her normal work shift, left the office. She did not notify anyone of her location. TSA said in a statement that there was no way for her to know she was not supposed to be in Oklahoma. “When agents are relieved and leave the office, they are not required to immediately notify
