Silicon (Si) and silicon germanium (SiGe) compound devices can operate with much lower power than devices fabricated in silicon on insulator (SOI) substrates. This is primarily because the depletion layer, which is built up in the body of the Si or SiGe device when the device is operated in the inversion mode, is much thinner, has much lower capacity, and lower resistivity. This results in better device performance. In addition, it has been observed that the operating speed of transistors fabricated in silicon on insulator substrates is the same as the corresponding devices fabricated in bulk silicon. In contrast, for a given supply voltage, the device current is much lower in Si and SiGe devices than in silicon on insulator devices. That is, the device current will be known to rapidly increase when a voltage is applied to a device fabricated in bulk silicon even though the voltage is well below the device's breakdown voltage. In contrast, the device current in a Si or Si
