“The results of our work with external partners has played a significant role in helping us develop FIFA 22’s player movement behaviours,” said Peter Huljat, senior gameplay engineer at EA SPORTS. “We’re incredibly excited to show players the types of seamless, realistic movement they’ve never experienced before on the new PlayStation and Xbox consoles.” Additional new gameplay features in FIFA 22 include Dynamic Player Ratings, which gives players the ability to track real-life players’ performance and attribute those ratings to player performance. To do this, players can record their on-field actions and receive a rating based on their performance. The “Player Ratings” card on the FIFA 22 on-screen “Warnings & Alerts” screen and in the FIFA Ultimate Team Squad Builder gives players vital information at a glance that can be used to assess and improve their playing style. FIFA Ultimate Team contains almost 10,000 players, all with different attributes, so to ensure players can manage their teams’ squad depth effectively, FIFA 22 introduces the Player Status Card, which allows players to see what they need to do to improve their player status. The card includes a progression bar that reflects player performance in the last 90 days, as well as a bar that tracks how well players are in the current season. Both show the player's most recent performance for the last 90 days, how that relates to the current season, as well as recent performance. The ability to customize player attributes has been significantly enhanced in FIFA 22 with new technology including Improved Player Attributes Customization. Players can now change the weight of the ball to create their perfect 'one-two' pass or perfect 'nearly-flick' shot. They can also change player power so they can pass through 10 players, score from almost 40 meters out or make the perfect assist. To ensure that FIFA 22's gameplay will be realistic, Dynamic Shot Difficulty has been developed using the latest research, which helps create more realistic passes, shots and saves. "We looked at every aspect of player gameplay: player movement, ball physics, ball control and the different styles and technical abilities of players," said David Rutter, lead gameplay engineer at EA SPORTS. "Creating the best gameplay for every player on the pitch has been the top priority for our development team all year. In FIFA 21, we took player

Is there any domestic crisis on the horizon? It would be an overreaction, but to understand the spectacular rise of neo-Nazism and neo-Fascism, note that in April 1942, when the Germans were still just a few hundred miles north of the city where I live in Austria, they gathered - and killed - some 10,000 people in a night. The Nazi leadership, which had made elaborate efforts to isolate the military-industrial complex from the political system, suddenly awoke to the threat of civil war. Himmler therefore ordered the SS to implement a code of conduct for the armed forces: The SS are the ideological shock troops. That order, while reprehensible in the extreme, had the beneficial effect of splitting the Hitler Youth from the SS (despite some questionable acts on the part of the SS, their motives were more honourable), as they needed time to get ready for the next stage in their murderous career, the destruction of the people of Europe. The choice of the year 1942 might seem rather unfortunate, for in the same year the Allies were marching across Europe, but there is a link with today. Not only is Europe at the edge of civil war, but Europe's oldest Christian institution, the Holy Roman Empire, was officially dissolved in the 1920s

FIFA is a global phenomenon. In clubs, leagues and more than 203 countries across the world, fans play and watch the incredible game which has become synonymous with football. FIFA has delivered new innovations and gameplay advancements for the past four years. Our team members – with more than 2,100 direct contributions in 2016 – continue to bring their passion for the world’s most watched game to the game itself. One aspect of these innovations has been our approach to the game’s live stream components. We have been investing and refining our live broadcast production tools over the past year as the game evolves. With more than half of all of the world’s football fans following FIFA competitions on TV and online, our ambition is to provide an unparalleled experience. In 2016, the live broadcast functions of the game have been updated in four areas, including: Matchday Broadcast, New 3D broadcast, Matchday TV Broadcast, and Mobile Broadcast. In Matchday Broadcast, fans in the UK are now joined by two coaches during pregame, halftime and postgame shows. Other new features on the matchday broadcast include an expanded roster of pro-team commentators and a wealth of highlights from the past day’s matches. In New 3D broadcast, users can find more matchday matches presented in a new 3D View. Viewers in Asia, Europe and the US can access new events and popular matches, including several Champions League matches in 3D View. In Matchday TV Broadcast, users now have the option of viewing match replays and three-minute highlights. These new features are displayed in easy-to-access broadcasts, streamed directly to mobile devices. In Mobile Broadcast, users can now watch live streams for matches and archives of their favourite competitions using smartphones and tablets. With each new update to the live broadcast features, the game has been further refined and perfected, from the ground-up, and we are excited to continue to provide new gameplay innovations that drive our vision to be the best football game on the planet. In addition to the new functional improvements across the game, we have invested significant efforts in improving the visual experience for users. This is the fourth iteration of the game in four years, with our focus since before the new season begins. The game has evolved and improved in every way. For both sports fans and the player base, we want to deliver the very best FIFA. The ever-changing FIFA scene in the 18
