Combination of endoscopic submucosal dissection and endoscopic full-thickness resection for gastric submucosal tumors: technical note. Endoscopic full-thickness resection (EFTR) is a new technique for submucosal tumors (SMTs). The aim of this study was to evaluate the safety and efficacy of EFTR for SMTs. A total of 22 gastric SMTs were removed using the EFTR method between May 2006 and July 2010 in our institution. In EFTR, a 15-mm circular mucosal incision was made circumferentially around the tumor. A submucosal flap was detached using a hot biopsy forceps with submucosal saline injection. An ultrasonically powered knife was used to dissect the submucosal layer down to the muscularis propria in the gastric submucosa layer until the tumor was cleared. The mean tumor size was 33 mm (range 15-80 mm). Histologic examination of the resected tissue confirmed mucosal cancer in 18 patients and benign mucosal lesion in 4 patients (3 hyperplastic polyps and one adenoma). The mean duration of the procedure was 71.5 min (range 44-160 min). No complications occurred. The rate of en bloc resection and complete resection was 100% and 95.5%, respectively. Pathological examination showed good resection margin in all cases (100%). The combination of endoscopic submucosal dissection and EFTR appears to be safe and effective in the treatment of large gastric SMTs.
