Game is pretty simple! Player will control two tanks and race against the opponent. Each tank has different components on it. The tanks can add power, armor, intelligence and firepower. The components also have the same influence on tank performance on each tank. For the second time in less than a year, New York authorities have taken the rare step of warning of a bioterrorist threat involving anthrax. Using the latest update from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the New York State and City health departments on Friday sent out a warning to residents in nine rural counties in central and western New York. "A postal worker has developed cutaneous anthrax from handling mail to which anthrax has been mailed," said the joint alert from the health departments. "This is an unusual cause of cutaneous anthrax, and it reflects the persistence of the bioterrorist threat in our state." The warning was sent to residents of Broome, Chenango, Cortland, Delaware, Erie, Madison, Monroe, Onondaga, and Seneca counties. It comes after a similar warning was issued in December by the New York City health department. Not a threat to New York City. Roughly 1,600 cases of cutaneous anthrax have been reported to the CDC in the United States since 2001, with nearly all of those cases associated with the September-October mailings of anthrax-tainted letters to media outlets in New York and Florida, according to the CDC. The New York Department of Health classified the risk from the disease to be "low to New York City residents." The alert said that since a postal worker initially developed a cutaneous anthrax infection from handling the mail, health officials were investigating how it might have been contracted. "The anthrax-tainted letters mailed to Florida and New York were mailed in five-county regions in Central New York -- Broome, Chenango, Cortland, Delaware, and Onondaga counties," the alert said. "Also mailings were made in Cortland and Madison counties in Western New York -- Delaware, Erie, Monroe, and Oneida counties." The alert said that mail opening notifications have been initiated and that residents in the areas described are urged to carefully inspect their mail before opening it. "Do not use any form of powered energy to open a sealed letter or package that may be addressed to you; it may harm you," the alert said

What's new in HEATED:

Endless ATC is a software and operating system application from Autumn Labs Inc. for Automatic Takeoff and Landing (ATL) systems. It was developed to improve the efficiency and autonomy of unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) operating in urban environments. This platform consists of an operating system (Endless OS) that comes with a number of computer programs that work together to support the UAV's control over the device's flight paths. The Endless ATC (abbreviated EATC) is available to the public and can be downloaded from Endless' website. The core of the Endless ATC functionality is contained within the on-board computer. This computer is attached to the UAV's autopilot and sensors. It is what controls the device and monitors the UAV's status. The program and method of operation is based on that of professional models of UAVs. The operation of the computer requires an on-board energy source to provide its function. For the Endless ATC, this is provided by batteries, flywheels or solar panels. Endless ATC was originally developed to be a low-cost option to operate UAVs, focusing on commercial applications. It was later developed into a platform for training for those interested in learning to operate UAVs. In its new release version 2, Endless ATC added two new vertical flight modes: Elevate and Zenith. Elevate means that the drone is oriented to the Earth like a satellite, while Zenith means the drone is oriented toward the sky like a balloon. In addition, Endless ATC now features the ability to power UAVs with an external ESC, using ESCs to run the drone. Overview As the name implies, Endless ATC is capable of providing continuous and uninterrupted control of the UAV as long as power is supplied to it. The self-powered UAV operates at a low enough flight altitude to enable it to transition between the protected region (not affected by collision/interaction with other UAVs or people) over the broadcast region above the UAV. The distance/height at which this transition occurs is known as the transmission range. While the internal computer, connection and transmission range are useful features, other capabilities are also important for purposes of UAV operation in urban and outdoor environments. These include: Automatic Link Establishment (ALE), which allows the UAV to establish a radio link with the transmitter and establish communication within a broadcast region above the UAV.
