1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to audio/video switching systems and, more particularly, to a programmable audio/video switching system which provides for the automatic recognition of a standard audio/video signal and selectively switches between the video and audio signals to control the playback of the audio/video information.
2. Description of the Prior Art The popularity of the video tape recorder and similar equipment has increased considerably in recent years. It is therefore desirable to provide a device which may be used to switch the playback of video and audio information between the video recorder and other devices, such as a television receiver. A number of attempts have been made to provide audio/video switches having a standard format. One such attempt is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 3,701,767, which issued to A. Leiser et al. on Oct. 31, 1972. The Leiser et al. apparatus requires that a user preprogram the system for a particular application and is not able to automatically recognize the standard format. Another such attempt is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 3,891,994, which issued to R. Stidle on June 24, 1975. The Stidle apparatus is also limited in that it requires that the user preprogram the system and is not able to automatically recognize the standard format. Other examples of known audio/video switching systems include the following: U.S. Pat. No. 3,857,039, which issued to W. L. Harden on Dec. 31, 1974; PA1 U.S. Pat. No. 3,874,985, which issued to A. F. McCulloch on Apr. 1, 1975;
