This feature has not been present since the release of Photoshop CS5. * Photoshop requires macOS 10.6 or higher, a 2 GHz Intel processor, and 4 GB of memory. For a list of compatible devices and models, see Appendix A. * Photoshop can open only 8-bit files. ## Using a Video Capture Device Photos taken with the built-in camera on a mobile device may look great, but you may want to edit them using a more advanced application. You can then store the original with the edited versions. If your device lacks a built-in capture device, check out a table such as the one in Table 10-3 for your model of mobile device to determine what other apps you need. However, having access to Photoshop isn't always necessary because a video-based capture solution works pretty well. Chapter 14 discusses a mobile photo-editing app called Snapseed that uses a video-editing app to do a good job of extracting and then editing color data from the original photos. Table 10-3. Growth factors and their targets. The production of growth factors by specific cells has long been recognized as one of the mechanisms by which one cell contributes to the phenotype of another cell. The discovery of transforming growth factor-beta (TGF-beta) and epidermal growth factor (EGF) stimulated the identification of other growth factors and a general picture of growth factor action is beginning to emerge. Interest in growth factors in general and in TGF-beta in particular arose at a time when investigators were seeking a 'general' molecule which could explain the phenomenon of regeneration in amphibians and the rest of the body's response to injury. Interest in growth factors as regulators of tissue growth was stimulated initially by the discovery that tumors produce growth factors which enhance cell proliferation. The identification of 'receptors' has led to the concept of specific growth factor 'responses' in which a given cell, or part of a cell, is triggered to produce such a response. A variety of growth factors are now being purified or synthesized and their action investigated. Many of the signals recognized are transmembrane events which involve activation of specific growth factor receptors coupled to changes in cellular metabolism.
