The present invention relates to a device and method for preparing fried food, and more particularly, to a heated fryer that reduces the time required to prepare foods that are typically cooked in deep fat. A number of different devices are available for cooking a variety of foods. For example, it is common to cook foods such as poultry by boiling the foods in a basin of water, and then cooking the cooked foods in a fryer that utilizes deep fat. Fried foods tend to absorb grease from the oil and separate from the food as they cool. Consequently, fried foods typically must be consumed relatively quickly. The present invention seeks to provide a fryer that reduces the time it takes to cook and serve fried food. In one aspect, a fryer is disclosed that includes a plurality of oil containers, and a storage vessel. Each of the oil containers are configured to hold oil and the
