only result that is directly related to the choice of C is Figure 2C{ref-type="fig"}, where the time-delay to the start of the outbreak was found to be larger when ϵ is decreased (as C is increased).

The authors should discuss in detail the role of the threshold constant C . Reviewer #2: This manuscript demonstrates that even though the number of triangles in the social network matter in the spreading of the virus, the epidemic threshold and the time to outbreak for virus diffusion decrease with an increasing of the number of triangular nodes. Reviewer #3: The paper addresses a long-standing and important issue of
