CHARM3D IS: -A Worldwide Network of Friends Who Share and Express Their Love For the "I" -A Site That's Unequivocal to Going Out and Meeting with Friends to Play When Time PermitsTruncated bumblebee (Bombus terrestris L.) nestmate recognition, probed by odor of nest donors, is mediated by the cercal galea. Nestmate recognition is under sex-specific neuroendocrinological control in this bumblebee species. Merged optic nerve staining enabled us to study truncated bumblebee nestmate recognition, probed by odor of the nest donor bee. We found that the female's cercal galea was dusted with a small patch of local chemoreceptors necessary to perceive stinging bee olfactory cues in bumblebees. Our results indicate that bumblebee nestmate recognition is tightly regulated by neuroendocrinological processes.Production of cassava starch from cassava waste for polyhedra formulation. Cassava waste (CW) has been increasingly recognized as a viable resource to replace food and feed resources. In this study, a laboratory-scale hydrothermal process was used to produce cassava starch from CW for polyhedron production. The resultant starch processing liquor containing high glucose concentration was acid hydrolyzed, and demineralized into glucose. Further chemical treatment using the glucose recovery process yielded a crude polyhedron formulation with $92.51\% \pm 0.68\%$ of starch content. In addition, the physicochemical properties of crude starch derived from CW showed better pasting properties than those from chemically treated purified starch ($>98\%$ purity). Therefore, CW can be an efficient alternative for starch isolation with only minimal physical and chemical manipulation. This study thus provides a novel way to reduce food waste, which is at present disproportionately long-lived and costly. }
