Doc Clock is an "insanely fun game" that "touches many different areas of physics" and "creates a unique experience with its unique mixture of mechanics". It explores "the interplay between mathematics and reality" through "a unique presentation" and "special achievement". A "carefully created 3D world" set in a "very DIY-ish 2D game world" is "both a joy to play and a lovely aesthetic touch". The "easy to grasp basics" of the game are "only the start" and the "interesting and never dated physics" make up the heart of the game. The unique approach to the "gameplay" is "infectious, varied, and very fun", but the "creepy, funny, and bizarre twist" makes the "patience pay off for real". "Our hands won't move" and the game "is all about doing that". It is a "very satisfying" "noodle physics" puzzle game. "Much better than I expected it to be". About the creator: DoC is the first game I ever made. I have been a game developer and gamer for several years now and have always been interested in the relationship between the 2 disciplines. In 2012 I attended Game Insight, an educational conference for Game Developers. There I saw a motion graphics demo of a cube falling and rotating around. I re-envisioned the same demo. I wanted to use as little Flash as possible. I did an early 2D prototype in Flash, but it was unsatisfying. After the conference I set out to build a 2D version of this demo, with a minimal Flash background and lots of physics. I built up this prototype, which I named Doc Clock, over several months. I uploaded it to my website and it received some interest. I had also learned Flash from my previous Flash prototype, so I decided to start a new project in a real programming language. I started working with Blender and quickly made a new prototype, Doc Control. Soon I had both prototypes running in parallel. I spent a few months testing and tweaking both prototypes. DoC was the first to actually go live on the website. The rest is history. Doc Clock was originally a smaller c9d1549cdd

Poco-chan's Dream Kisaragi is a small and quiet village in the countryside, but it was originally a very active town.Nowadays, although it is only 3 people, it is bustling with activity.People come and go town at any time of day.It is a small town, and the new building work is underway.Except for the sky, everything is covered with a layer of mist.Kisaragi is a landscape which usually the clouds are scattered.Walking through the mist is difficult.However, through the mist from the foggy weather, its own footsteps seem natural, a sense of realism.If I approach, I can hear a voice.The voice sounds like "Poco-chan, is it time for you to open your eyes?""I want to draw comics in the town" "Poco-chan, I'm home!" "There is something happening in town" "Here, I've brought your manga magazine to read." "No!" "Poco-chan, it is 4 o'clock" "Poco-chan, it's about to rain" "Poco-chan, it's sunset" "Here, I've brought your bath water" "Poco-chan, I've brought a new delicacy to you.Is it delicious?" "It is time to eat, why don't we have some food together?"Those who live in Kisaragi say that it is natural to talk with each other through the mist.Poco-chan is also one of them. Events in the town It is a quiet old-fashioned town.There are no skyscrapers, and there are not many hotels.However, in Kisaragi, there is a small bar, a dojo, and the general store.There are also some things which could be seen in other towns like a parking lot in front of a house and a bus stop.There are also very many small shops. The events of this town as follows: Most of the people in the town are young.They are happy and talkative, and they love games.Because of the declining birthrate, there is only a small number of children in Kisaragi.Because of this, most of the adults in Kisaragi have come to live in the mountain, enjoying themselves.There are two houses in the town, in addition to the house where Poco-chan lives.One is the house of the father of Poco-chan, the other is the house of

> We all make mistakes, and we always try to get the books back to the shelves. But for some reason we neglected to put them back where they belong. Many such locations are spectacular. They look like somebody hauled the books into the middle of the country and drove them into the ground. See if you can identify them. Can you tell which of these books belonged to the previous inhabitant of this house and which belonged to someone's grandmother? Hint: Think carefully and try to distinguish the smells. Hint: The book in the middle is misaligned, so I guess it does not belong to an old lady. I once placed my book on a shelf and forgot about it for a long time. Years later, my oldest friend (from college) came to visit. I was in the same room with this strange character looking for something. I like to say that this woman was living in the same house I was when I was a kid and our father was away fighting in World War II. She looked at my book on the shelf and said "Your grandmother's on the same side as Hitler," and gave me a little grin. She always has been able to zero in on what is amusing. "Russ," said Alice, still not taking her eyes off the garment in the shop window, "this is what I call a rumpscarf." "Well," I said, "yes and no. At several points in history it was called a britchas, a pinafore, and occasionally a fensters; and at others, a grenadine, a blintz, a kilt, a sjambok, a maltyskotchus, and a jubook. The rhyme has about as much chance of working as the presence of a tassled chapeau, so why is it that you are asking why it is called a britchas?" "Now, you look here," said Alice. "I say this garment is called a britchas, and nothing you can say can make me change my mind. And furthermore, if it is rumpscarf you want, there's plenty of rumps on hand, in the shape of a mountain of rumps of every type imaginable." # An asterisk offers a *Warning. The use of the term "Cutie" is prohibited in the Small Talk Blog. On the first warm day of spring I went running

Told through the eyes of the world's most heart-breaking and irresistible sim, this story is set in a meticulously crafted universe from the creators of the award-winning, visual novel, We Happy Few. Meet Lucy, an incredibly cheerful pop star who has been horribly transformed into a vampire. Now, Lucy is determined to live her afterlife in the most joyous, demented way she can, and the entire city is watching… A mix between a dating sim and a visual novel, Lovingly Evil asks you to make the greatest choice in its history: Who will you choose? Create your character and take a journey through the city of Portland and its magic nightlife, lovingly crafted and populated with hundreds of characters. Write your own destiny with the traditional visual novel quest, and then you'll get to experience the big bad dating sim through the eyes of Lucy, a vampire who's really just trying to get her groove on. Hilarious quests, characters and music come together to create a world full of magic, romance, horror and laughs, where everything in life is back to front. Customer Reviews "If you like Urban Fantasy, Gothic Horror, Supernatural Romance, Vampires or just having fun, then Lovingly Evil is the game for you!" 4.5/5 – Starblitz Game Reviews "If you like pop culture, you'll enjoy Lovingly Evil." 5/5 – Gamezebo Lovingly Evil is a visual novel with a twist in the sexual department. As one of the people created by Lovingly Evil, you'll find yourself hooked on the concept. You will meet a wide variety of characters, and you can just watch as the story unfolds. For a game this in-depth, Lovingly Evil delivers a lot of content, with about 45 hours of gameplay for the base game. Despite its length, you can play through the game in less than a day. The game is very deep and puts a lot of thought into the story and characters. Lovingly Evil is unique in a lot of ways, and it delivers a fantastic story in a unique world. If you're looking for a unique dating sim or just a great ending to an otherwise average dating sim, you can't go wrong with Lovingly Evil. Lovingly Evil is a story about a pair of vampires, David and Lucy, and their relationship with one another. They'

Q: D3 dropdown chart, display static values between multiple dropdowns Would like to create some dropdowns and have them be coupled together. As user selects a category, I would like the category displayed on a static element, such as a textbox, a span, or a label. Would really appreciate some help. Here are some pieces to the puzzle. I am new with JS / D3 so looking for some constructive pointers. Dropdowns from the following fiddle: var svg = d3.select("body") .append("svg"); svg.attr("width", 400) .attr("height", 400) .append("g") .attr("transform", "translate(50,50)") var width = 400, height = 400; var data = [{ "transition-time": 40, "x": [1
