Win/Mac; 30 days free trial; $49.95 to buy Ice6 for Mac 4.3.32 Ice6 for Mac is a nifty Mac alternative for Windows and Linux based IceTracker. The iOS app is designed with native iPhone-style navigation, and you can also tweak your speed, elevation and preferred route defaults in the settings. It's easy to find a map and start pointing your iPhone over to-and-from locations. It automatically detects your travels' GPS location coordinates and shows them on the map. You can also click on a specific point on the map to view its details, like the elevation, speed and the distance to the next point. You can also search for points of interest and bookmark them in the map view. You can now, see your tracks as an outline, with the latitude and longitude automatically calculated when you add a new position to the itinerary. The map is navigable, zoomable and waypoints can be selected with ease. Included in the download is a built-in, offline map of the US, Canada, and Mexico which is simply called 'US'. All of the included maps are in KML format, which makes them easy to open in Google Earth. Ice6 for Mac Description: OS X 10.6; $12.95 to buy eTrex Vista-2 eTrex Vista-2 GPS-enabled devices for maps. One has a watch face that can be customized, but the other is designed for a full-featured handheld, where you can set preferences, as well as edit and add tracks. It's $89.99, and can store 500MB of tracks with 1,000,000 waypoints. The apps have native map rendering via Google Earth, and include drag-to-zoom and panning. You can also zoom in and out on the map, scroll around with the map and use one of the many pre-loaded data sets to save map data. The interface is a little simplified compared to other apps, with no screen real estate for features. There's one specific way of importing data from an earlier version, and no option to convert tracks to data. It's just a nice little app that is very easy to navigate. eTrex Vista-2 Description: Windows Vista/7; $69.99 to buy MyTracks GPS Tracking and Mapping Application MyTracks GPS Tracking and Mapping is an excellent iPad

Illusory line bisection in children: measuring direction dependence of an eye-controlled illusion. Researchers have employed three different tasks to assess the cognitive functions of bisection and of line-length estimation. This article reports the use of a novel, vision-based task, which requires localization of the midpoint of a straight line displayed in the center of the visual field (in the absence of any head movement). A step-by-step approach to establish the cortical areas involved in this task is reported. First, the performance of children (5-13 years of age) is examined, followed by a review of how they perform on this task in the light of work in animals. Finally, a possible role for the right parietal cortex is considered.var searchData= [['anddata_2086',['andData',['../struct_n_v_i_c___type.html#af5619a75f7401b1a7a948caa8d9c06d0',1,'NVIC_Type']]], ['andmask_2087',['andMask',['../struct_t_p_i_c___type.html#a3b83c9624ccd541596c7bd2d3a78f7cb',1,'TPIC_Type']]], ['anrst_2088',['anrst',['../struct_i_t_m___type.html#a0cf7b83bbb496c1e2c3e0e9ee5b2d6a2',1,'ITM_Type']]], ['armcc_2089',['armcc',['../struct_n_v_i_c___type.html#a35f723d5efef0dd23a05a35cc53b0cbb',1,'NVIC_Type']]]]; This invention relates to an electrophotographic apparatus and process of the xerographic type.
