I'm excited to see the new veggie-based dish, which is being advertised as a vegan alternative to meatballs. In my opinion, it's still a meatball. The product is simple with mostly tofu and some added vegetables. The textures are meaty and satisfying. There are no questions with this product - you don't get any filler, and the health benefits are subtle at best. In fact, veggie-based meatballs are far healthier than animal-based meatballs. There is a downside, though. The veggie-based meatballs are $12 for a 20-oz. box of 4-oz. balls. This is a bit pricey for a meatball, and it could be argued that a similar volume of tofu could be used and the cost be cut in half. It would also appear that the vegan meatballs are slightly smaller than the non-vegan ones.Q: Finding the position in NVD3 chart I am trying to figure out how to get the position of a point in NVD3. The following code displays the chart and positions one point on top of it. What I need is to position a point on top of the 'y1' and the 'y2' line instead of the red dot.
NVD3.showChart(JSON.parse(sons), "#chart");
function positionPoint(chart, x, y) {
var pt = chart.svg.selectAll('circle').data([x, y]);
pt.enter().append('circle')
