Rising tensions lead to war and destruction. The flame of hope, though, survives. Great wisdom, healing and progress are being restored. A new order. Together, we will find our way." This is a story about an alien society that has sent an expedition to Earth so they can learn about this planet. They want to see if we are worth it or if it's better to leave us alone to burn in the fires. This is a symbolic way for them to decide what to do. Is there a way to disable log statements that are written in the ambari web console? I have an AWS cluster, and the web console is getting a little annoying. I know I can stop Hadoop, but it would be nice to disable some of the background messaging and web console logs, if possible. A: The Ambari Web UI itself is in fact not log-based. So if you are seeing those logs you are probably seeing another servlet running in the same server as the web ui. If you stop the ambari daemon, you should see some UI changes, but the logs should disappear. Q: the probability that a poisson distributed random variable takes integer values smaller than 5. The poisson process with parameter  $\lambda$  is given by the random variable  $X_t$ .  $X_t = X_{t-1} + N(0, \lambda(t-1))$  Let  $X_i$  be the  $i^{th}$  value of the process after  $i$  steps,  $X_1 \leq$

Q: Can you define an enum with constant values in swift 4.2? Can someone tell me why you can't do this in swift? I get the error NS_ENUM: constants can only be used in a protocol, class, or extension here is my code :

```
enum NextGameStatus { case Finished var description: String { switch self { case Finished: return "The next game is finished" } } static func name(enumValue: NextGameStatus) -> String { switch enumValue { case Finished: return "Finished" } } }

A: You may not use a type as enum's value, you can only use its name. In Swift 4.2 you can now define an enum with constant values. The reason you get an error is that by Swift's rules you're using the enum's value outside of its context. This compiles fine:

```
enum NextGameStatus { case Finished var
```
