Admiral v Smit Admiral v Smit was a significant case in South African law concerning the boundaries of conservation areas. It was heard in the Witwatersrand Local Division. Facts A group of farmers owned two farms and wanted to consolidate them. The farmers applied for a provisional conservation order. Their application was opposed by the owners of the land which had been used as a shooting range, the recreational shooting club. The shooting club wanted to continue shooting on the disputed land. Judgment The court held that the consolidation was invalid and that the shooting club retained the right to shoot. See also South African law References Justice Edwards, C. (2012).
