the relationships between bipolar and schizophrenia symptoms in bipolar I outpatients.
The comorbidity of bipolar disorder and schizophrenia has been well documented, but few studies have investigated the relationship between bipolar symptoms and schizophrenia symptoms. To investigate the relationships between bipolar and schizophrenia symptoms in manic outpatients. Patients diagnosed with bipolar I disorder (N=176) were enrolled in this study. We assessed the following using the self-report version of the Comprehensive Psychopathological Rating Scale (CPRS-R): manic, hypomanic, psychotic and schizophrenic symptoms and the Young Mania Rating Scale (YMRS), Brief Psychiatric Rating Scale (BPRS) and the Positive and Negative Syndrome Scale (PANSS). A diagnosis was not assigned in six patients, so they were excluded from this study. Using logistic regression, we examined the relationships between the symptoms, and between particular symptoms and the YMRS, BPRS and PANSS. The mean age of the patients (63.1 years) was significantly younger than that of patients with schizophrenia (69.2 years). Approximately one-fifth of the patients had both manic and psychotic symptoms. No significant relationships were found between particular symptoms and the YMRS, BPRS and PANSS. Therefore, the presence of psychotic symptoms was not a predictor of the presence of manic symptoms. The relationship between the presence of manic and psychotic symptoms is unclear, although it may be important to focus on bipolar I patients with both manic and psychotic

When you click on an email in Windows 10, it automatically opens an app called "Mail" and opens the email in the app. This is a welcome feature for some, but I'm trying to figure out how to do the same in my UWP app. I've tried using System.Mail.ItemOperations.OpenWith and System.Mail.ItemOperations.OpenWithItem but this doesn't seem to open an email. Is there any way to do
