If you are familiar with the process of adding new users to a Windows computer, you are familiar with the process of adding them to a domain. Imagine that you just finished adding a bunch of users from your local domain but they need to be added to a different domain and you want to make the transfer as quick as possible. If that is the case, you’ll need to follow these steps: Open the Start menu and type the name of the user you want to transfer to the new domain; Right-click on the user’s shortcut and select Properties; Navigate to the Compatibility tab and select “Run this program as an administrator;” Select the “Run” option; Enter the name of the new domain (for example “yourdomain.com”); Enter the domain name of the computer to which the user will be added (for example “otherdomain.com”); Click on the “OK” button; Enter a username and password for the new user; Click on the “OK” button. The user will now be added to the new domain. The only problem with the above procedure is that it requires you to go to the Start menu every time you want to add a new user to the computer. There is a much better way to add users from a computer’s registry. To use the registry, you’ll first need to disable any add-on features that may have been installed by the previous owner. To do this, right-click on the desktop and select Control Panel; Navigate to the Add or Remove Programs tab and click on the “Remove a Program” button; Select the add-on you want to disable; Click on the “Disable” button; Click on the “Apply”
