Need for Speed has played a huge role in helping develop racing games for many years now, and it's only normal for a company as big as EA to get a game about racing. To help promote the new Need For Speed, EA rolled out a small TV spot called "Road Rage" featuring the cast of the game and the voice cast of the game, but they didn't mention a release date. Apparently the company started getting this started before the death of actor Joseph Gordon-Levitt, and I think we can all see why. Need for Speed is an upcoming racing game developed by EA Canada and published by Electronic Arts. It was released on April 15th in North America, April 18th in Europe, May 2nd in Australia, and May 4th in Japan. What can we expect from this upcoming racing game? Be it something racing related, or not, I don't know. Hopefully, I will get to find out more about this upcoming racing game soon. I, honestly, have not played any games in any of the Sims series, though I have, in the past, played some other EA games. I just really don't know how in-depth the game is. So I have never played a game based in the city or a "city" type of city. Being an old-school gamer, this game piqued my interest since I haven't really been playing a lot of games lately. I hope it turns out to be something good. I did not mention this yet. I am also playing it right now. Don't know if I will keep it, since I usually play FPS games, but this one is on TV, right now, so I can't be hard on it. It is made by EA, who make computer games and console games. When it comes to games, I am most of all a FPS gamer, but I never got into a racing game. I am a little unsure as to whether I like it or not. It is kind of fun, but I do not know if it will last me. It is one of those games that I will have to try a few times, before I decide whether to keep it or not. I'm trying to think of good reasons to keep it, but
