And Community Pools John releases a new Cities: Skylines patch called the Natural Disasters and Community Pool Update. wharf, bridge, insuline, and much more. Skip to 3:30 for the gameplay video, or read on for more details. Suspense: Level Design One of the newer features in Cities: Skylines is the ability for player-designed level designers to have their level designs submitted into the game. The system is brand new and so it's quite a challenge for them to manage. Players have submitted some amazing designs and so with the knowledge that there have been in-game examples, it's fantastic to see what players can produce. Robert reported a work in progress of three wormholes being layered on top of each other in the level design feature, each one progressing to a different overall elevation. Solid work. Using the new natural disasters comes with a couple of issues, the first of which is location. Bryce mentioned a great quote on the forums from Cities!Highway: "Natural disasters tend to be spectacular, so we recommend that you focus on making your area look as epic as possible." We have good news for all of you natural disaster lovers: you can consider yourself lucky today for there is more than good news. GULP. Natural disasters can strike anywhere, so the skill gap for developing your area will be dependent on where you reside. Usually, most disasters will unfold in recent years and so this is something everyone can game in and is something they can game to achieve greater heights. The new disaster system is designed to be less about "military"-like destruction and more about raw destruction. Players are going to want to visibly see the quakes, volcanoes, tsunamis and the like so that the spectators as well as your opponents can see what's come to pass. Building Intensity The new disaster system offers a plethora of buildings, stats, and features. A lot of these come from the game's Korean and Australian communities. Or just about anybody. Wildfires, where you lit a pixel, will affect your surroundings and a burning pixel nearby will increase

You are a young cop in the midst of a shooting. You go through the mist of everything in a dazed kind of way. What really matters to you right now is to take care of your beautiful and fragile girlfriend, Elizabeth. The girl you love more than anything. This is the story of a man who has everything, and finds it all so terribly fragile and liable to tear. That's why life is so precious. Plot In an apartment in New York City, a young couple (Nathan and Elizabeth) talk about future plans. Before he leaves the house, Nathan takes a gun with him, intending to go buy a gift for Elizabeth's birthday. He is kidnapped by a gang of robbers who take their money and flash-in-the-pan tickets for a concert. They put Nathan's girlfriend Elizabeth in front of the wheel of an approaching car, threatening to kill her if he doesn't drive them to a parking lot. After failing to find the parking lot, the gang leaves Nathan in a quiet part of the city. While he is hurt and lost, he sees a man next to the street with a bottle of wine, talking to himself. Nathan turns around to look at the man again, but the man walks away. Nathan gets out of his car and runs after the man and stops him. Nathan asks what's his problem and the man says his name is Santa. Nathan invites him to come to his house, to which he agrees. The man goes with him, and he tells him that he owes him, but Nathan doesn't want anything back, so he agrees to let him stay with him if he doesn't steal anything. Afterward, Nathan throws a party for his girlfriend, and Santa appears in the form of a hologram. Santa later goes to their room and steals various objects. He steals Nathan's telescope and brings it to the living room where he takes the position of a doll. Santa goes to Nathan's room and finishes the things he found, turning his room into a Christmas tree. Meanwhile, a robber had tracked down Elizabeth and kidnapped her. Santa makes Nathan look for Elizabeth and brings her back to their home. He has a surprise for her and they talk about their relationship. He shows Nathan a photo of her in the present, with her boyfriend Ryan. This makes Nathan understand that the man he saw with the wine was Santa and he is Ryan. In reality, Santa is only a figment of Nathan's imagination. As a result, Nathan
