Miscadoo, a new service from Channel 5 Marketing, launched Thursday and serves as a new platform to target programs with binge-worthy content. It also announced partnerships with several networks, including Showtime and Discovery Health Channel, to promote their programming to viewers who have yet to subscribe to a cable subscription. “This has been a great summer for launching our television division,” Channel 5 President Dan Merriman said in a statement. “We’ve been focused on our digital business for years and we’re happy to start bringing our experience and success to the television platform.” The new service features up to 50-second commercials that run just once per week and are meant to attract viewers’ attention. Channel 5 Marketing was founded by L.A.-based agency DMG. Miscadoo will feature programming from Showtime, Discovery Health Channel and more than a dozen other networks. It is expected to launch in the fall. “Channel 5 is an innovative company with a proven track record of building innovative, creative and cutting-edge digital products with an audience-first approach,” said Dan Bernstein, executive vice president, worldwide distribution and licensing for Showtime Networks. Miscadoo’s ad will feature a character that acts as a connection to the channel, which will appear in viewers’ lockers.
