Q: In what order should I place Java Card EMV commands I have been wondering if there is some design standard regarding how Java Card commands (EMV) are placed. I know the official specification suggests to place commands one after another. But in reality, the way EMV is used in real world is the following: CardDispenser disp = new CardDispenser(card); disp.select(1) .select(2) .select(3) .select(4) .select(5) ... .select(n) .acknowledgeSelection(); I'm interested what the logic is behind that design. Edit: While the official specification defines the order of commands, it is never really clearly written which is the preferred order. When one code implements EMV, is the answer clear? A: I believe that this order is the most common: MSD1 - Select A1 - Select A2 - Select A3 MSD2 - Select B1 - Select B2 - Select B3 MSD3 - Select C1 - Select C2 - Select C3 MSD4 - Select D1 - Select D2 - Select D3 The reason for placing A after A is that it makes more sense logically, after selecting A1 there is no reason to select A2. Gamma Gamma may refer to: Astronomy Gamma (astrology), a star in the constellation Cancer, the crab Gamma Aquilae, a star in the constellation Aquila Gamma Eridani, a star in the constellation Eridanus Gamma Herculis, a star in the constellation Hercules Gamma Indi, a star in the constellation Indus Gamma Ophiuchi, a star in the constellation Ophiuchus Gamma Pictoris, a star in the constellation Pictor Gamma Sagittarii, a star in the constellation Sagittarius Sigma 2 Capricorni, a star in the constellation Capricornus Sigma Orionis, a star in the constellation Orion X Epsilon Pegasi, a star in the constellation Pegasus Other uses Gamma (heraldry), a heraldic charge representing a shield gamma (◆)
