My computer turns on but only shows the bios logo then goes black. The HDD light blinks and a power of mouse pointer shows up when the power button is pressed. I'm trying to repair the computer by following this tutorial: and when I press the power button to turn on the computer it boots into Windows. This could be a few different things. It's hard to tell without actually seeing the computer. You can try to boot into a recovery console. There is usually a keyboard combination to get into a recovery console on a Dell. You can use the article I linked to. You could try to reset the BIOS. If you are able to get into the BIOS you can try to either disable or reset the CMOS. Let us know what happens. Battery High? I have a Dell Inspiron 9400 laptop that was working fine yesterday (both battery and AC plug) and all of a sudden, today the battery's charging level appears as being above 100%, and the charging controller is flashing red. It appears to be a problem with the charging source - the power has an intermittent drop, with only a few seconds of AC power intermittently plugged into the laptop battery (about 0.5% of the time). I haven't tried testing it on battery, since I was afraid that if it was in battery mode, the charger might not work properly, but I did try the AC plug, and that doesn't seem to be the problem. If I unplug the AC plug, then charge it all the way to 100%, and then switch it back to AC, it will work fine, so it appears to be something with the power source itself. Drivers I have a retail copy of Windows 7 Home Premium 64 bit and need to install the following drivers:PNY GeForce GTS250 512 MB (Windows XP, Windows Vista) Any help?

A:GTS250 driver I have done some research and ran into a dead end. I have one last resort that I want to try. I am on a TeamViewer session right now and can provide you with all of the screen shots that you will need as well as access to the machine if you want to help. The issue:I started my Toshiba a520 about a month ago.I used a new brand of hard disk drives I found online (I

Users wanting to log into their accounts have been advised to phone their banks to confirm their log-in information. Sky customers have been unable to log into their accounts since the morning, while customers on Virgin Media and TalkTalk customers have been hit with problems in trying to log-in. It is unclear how long the problems will last, although the banks warn of possible lengthy queues. The problem came to light when Sky customer Roderick at Mount Street in Belfast emailed Belfast Live after he said he had been unable to log-in since the morning. He said he contacted his bank to find out what the problem was after being unable to access the site. "I phoned this morning the bank, they said that Sky were closed due to technical difficulties," he said. "I just got to Virgin, it's the same. I can't get into my account at all. I tried to log on before 8am." The problem came just as the potential for a Government green paper on competition law to be published was starting to make headlines. Both Sky and Virgin Media operate under the ownership of Rupert Murdoch's News

International, but there is no suggestion that the problems are linked. The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure, which is in charge of the broadband subsidy scheme, has been flooded with phone calls from customers struggling to get access to the login system and had started contacting banks to ask them what was happening. "The Department has contacted the largest incumbent provider of broadband to ensure that their network is operating normally and the Department is in contact with the broadband service provider to monitor the situation and ensure that such a thing does not occur again," a spokesman said. Customers affected by the downtime included families relying on the broadband service to download
