-Bomb Goethals Bomb-Bomb-Bomb Goethals was a Texan no-budget international thriller film directed by Vic Lujan. Plot Wealthy retiree/robber Oren Goethals (Jonas Dashjou) is buying up a herd of stolen art and shipping it to his garage at his private 'bomb' compound in Austin, when murders start occurring in his closely monitored garage. Goethals does not appear to be the target of these killings, or interested, so the police close the case, for lack of evidence. Oren's children are a little concerned, though, and they go to Tom (Michael Huff) and Dr. Natalie Jackson (Charlie Korsmo) to investigate the possibility of their father's guilt, as the first two murders were committed by vagrants in the community. They take the children to visit Johnny Paycheck (Jonas Dashjou), a composer and romantic poet, who lives at the Goethals compound, and is in love with his host's adopted daughter Natalie. While Johnny and Natalie are having an intimate moment on his unmade bed, a large masked man enters and murders Natalie. Dr. Jackson arrives at the compound and, after listening to a recording of Oren lecturing on financial matters to his employees, discovers the location of an extensive hidden chemical weapons stockpile located in the county dump. The authorities intercept the shipment containing the stolen art-work. When Navy Seals arrive at the compound, Oren attacks and kills them at gunpoint. Then he rages at his children for their failure to protect him. Now in control of the compound and with the police waiting outside the screen doors, Goethals throws a shotgun through his living room window, and chases his daughter Taffy and her fourteen-year-old runaway boyfriend, Matt (Ted Cassidy), to the adjoining abandoned cellar, in the hope of being able to finish them both off without them fighting back. While Natalie gathers supplies and combat gear to keep the bad guys at bay, she is unable to contact Johnny in time to warn him of what is going on. Johnny and the duo are startled by another masked man who appears suddenly, shoots Johnny with a pistol and flees on foot back towards his home. Back at the compound, Oren storms into Natalie's room and they finish out their combat training. They are interrupted by a third masked gunman
