Because business plans take time to create, small business owners are often overwhelmed at the task. Additionally, they may feel too busy to do things like create one. If you’re feeling these head-scratchers, then it’s time to get your head straight, step back, and start the planning process. Here are the 5 essentials of any business plan: Identify the Problem What’s holding your business back? Not enough marketing? Your website isn’t generating the traffic you need? Too little brand awareness? After determining what your small business’s biggest problem is, the best thing to do is to make a plan, and to begin immediately. Tell a Story If you’re in the “beginner” stage, your business isn’t quite grown. Many first-time business owners feel like they don’t have any experience, so if you’re one of those folks, a story can help you overcome that obstacle. What will your story be? In the end, it’s what will make your story stick in the mind of potential new customers. Your story can focus on the positive and the negative. For example, “Our products are the freshest on the market” will be a good story because the customers appreciate products that have higher quality. Identify the Solution “Hey,
