I'd like to make it so that if the function is called with a nullptr, it will return an empty string, or if the array is too small, it returns the length of the array to the user. Thanks for the help. A: You can try something like this: const size_t len = strlen(array); if (len max_length) // len is too small return "ERROR"; else return std::string(array, len); /* Licensed under the Apache License, Version 2.0 (the "License"); * you may not use this file except in compliance with the License. * You may obtain a copy of the License at * * * * Unless required by applicable law or agreed to in writing, software * distributed under the License is distributed on an "AS IS" BASIS, * WITHOUT WARRANTIES OR CONDITIONS OF ANY KIND, either express or implied. * See the License for the specific language governing permissions and

System Requirements For Fantasy Grounds - Mini-Dungeon Monthly 10:

By Alex Hoffman What does it mean to be fun? For many, it means laughter, laughing heartedly, laughing until tears come streaming down your face. In the gaming community, it means guns, explosions, and everything else in between. But the term "fun" can also mean something else. To some, it means a sense of freedom, power, and fun, being involved in a fictional world that has a point and purpose. This is the basis for most great games, from Pac-Man to Tomb Raider, which take a person in to a fantasy world
