Abby Wambach is the football mistress at EA Sports, and one of the athletes who volunteered to provide data. Wambach participated in two training sessions in which she was required to perform a series of moves and actions. While physical data was collected, the game's engineers went a step further and created a new engine that is also capable of analyzing Wambach's reaction patterns and based on that create the best possible interaction with the player. Wambach was followed by a crew of seven others, including the goalkeepers Toni Duggan and Hope Solo. "The training with Abby was quite an experience. It was intense," said Abby Wambach. During the training, we never told the engineers exactly what I was capable of, but based on the training and how the game reacted, it knew what moves and actions I was capable of. We were able to teach the game to understand my style and attributes. That's something I didn't really know would be possible."
