I am currently also majoring in German, and have had the opportunity to perfect my German skills there. I am currently working on either a master's or PHD thesis related to the neurophysiology of visual perception. My goal is to continue working in the field of biology, and possibly receive some degree of post-doctoral experience before pursuing research of my own. I would be willing to work with anyone interested in studying on their own. I am happy to help with any questions or concerns you may have. My teacher email is: lucy@elementar.es, and my introduction to this site is as follows: QUICK INFO TENNIS, MUSIC, AND RESEARCH I love playing tennis. I recently completed my first year of play at a tennis club in Santa Cruz, and I am very fortunate to have one of the best coaches

Review of the differential diagnosis]. Authors review the image findings in 42 patients with clinically malignant disease of the prostate, seen in the last five years. They make a critical analysis of the differential diagnosis of the main mimics of primary adenocarcinoma of the prostate. Features of malignancy can be found in these tumors: solid nodules, prominent extraprostatic growth, lymphatic invasion, necrosis, high cellularity and nuclear atypia. Criteria that help in the diagnosis of adenocarcinoma are age, palpable nodules, frequent vascular invasion, cell surface density and apical crowding. Criteria that help in the diagnosis of benign prostatic hyperplasia are absence of nodules, frequent single gland involvement, cystic or calcified nodules and lack of vesiculation.Q: Algorithm for creating a 2-level sort of multiple variables (dynamically) So I'm trying to create this very specific algorithm that I haven't seen in any other questions on Stack Overflow or elsewhere. I have one variable (an image) with multiple characters, each of which has a different color. For example: I then have a second variable with multiple characters, each of which has a different background-color. For example: I would like to create a third variable, which is a 2-level sort of multiple characters/background-colors. For example: Basically, I want to create a sort of 2-level sort of multiple characters/
