The string "Testing" is being added to the end of the text portion of the buffer. It should return the same value as when using StringBuffer.substring(), but it just throws the exception. public class Buffers { public static void main(String[] args) { StringBuffer buf = new StringBuffer("Testing"); String newString = buf.substring(buf.length() - 1); System.out.println(newString); } } A: You're passing a negative number to the StringBuffer constructor.
